Title: Biblia Sacra [Latin Vulgate Bible].

Creator: Unknown.

Place of creation: Unknown.

Physical description: Vellum, 606 leaves; 16 x 11 cm.

Summary: Dominican Vulgate Bible with dictionary of biblical terms. [Note, April 2013: scholars have suggested that this is a Paris university bible, not Dominican.]

Note: Bound in old full pig vellum over thin paper boards; raised bands to spine; manuscript title on top and bottom edge and on spine; white endpapers. Text written in black and red ink on extremely fine thin vellum in a single, neat, miniscule gothic hand. Running titles (occasionally trimmed) and chapter numbers in alternately red and blue; rubricated with lead; illuminated throughout with decorated letters in red, pink, light and dark blue, yellow, green and gold. Shaft divided into fillets of blue and salmon with filigree penwork extensions occasionally ending in leafy patterns and dragon-like beasts, tails interwoven with scrolls. Includes dictionary of biblical terms, p. [561-606]. In double columns; text 47 lines per column, dictionary 49 lines per column. Writing block: 112 x 66 mm. Occasional marginal notes. Gift of Philip D. Sang.

Manus 3: Catholic Church. [Book of Hours: Use of Rome]. (Italy), 15th c.

Date: 15th c.

Scope and Contents

Italy. Physical description: Vellum, 201 leaves; 11 x 8 cm.
Summary: Catholic Church liturgy and ritual. Contents include: Calendar (ff. 1 – 12 v.); Office of the Blessed Virgin Mary (ff. 13 r. – 106 r.); Seven Penitential Psalms (ff. 106 v.
– 132 v.), including the Litany of the Saints (ff. 122 r. – 128
r.) and the Preces [Traditional prayers after the Litany] (ff. 128
r. – 132 v.); Prayers to the Virgin (ff. 133 r. – 137 v.); Office of the Dead (ff. 138 r. – 194 r.); Hours of the Holy Cross (ff.
194 v. – 200 r.); Si quaeris miracula [Hymn for St. Anthony]
(ff. 200 v. – 201 v.). Text begins on f. 13 r.: Incipit officiu beatissimi virginis marie secundum consuetudinem romane curie usus. Note: Manuscript written in a single, neat gothic book hand, except final 3 pages (ff. 200 v. – 201 v.), the Si quaeris miracula of St. Anthony, which are written in a later hand. 3 large historiated initials surrounded by full borders, marking the beginning of the Office of the Virgin, the Penitential Psalms, and the Hours of the Cross, respectively:
Virgin and Child (f. 13 r.); King David Praying (f. 106 v.); Christ on the Cross (f. 195 r.). Space left in manuscript on
f. 137 v. for an historiated initial for the Office of the Dead, which was never drawn; thus Office of the Dead is missing
the first several words, and begins: [Dilexi quoniam exaudiet dominus] vocem orationis mee. A great number of large initials in colors and gold; additional small initials in red and blue, many with filigree pen decoration; colors of blue, green, red, purple, gold, and pink. Bound in full old green morocco over paper boards; gilt border to front and rear cover; gilt decoration and title to spine; white endpapers; front free endpaper detached; binding separated from text block at front hinge; first gathering loose. History of Brandeis's acquisition of the volume is unknown; possibly the gift of Philip D. Sang.

Title: Book of Hours (Ms. Brandeis University. MS 5).

Creator: Unknown.

Place of creation: Probably written and decorated in Paris.

Physical description: [100] manuscript leaves, bound: col. ill.; 155 x 100 mm.

Summary:

Note: Fragment, signatures a-c2 and p8 missing. Signatures: c³## d-o# p#. Written on vellum; rubricated in pale red, with fourteen full-page woodcut illustrations and varied woodcut scenes in the borders. Initial letters colored alternating blue and red, some also with gold. The full-page woodcuts are identical with the Book of hours published in Paris by Thielman Kerver for Gilles Remacle, around 1500. Original calf binding with blind-tooled gilt emblems on both sides. With the original owner's woodcut bookplate. Gift of Philip D. Sang.
Summary: Manuscript treatise on music theory by the Italian Franciscan friar Bonaventura da Brescia, also known as Anterus Maria de San Bonaventura. The treatise deals with the principles of performing both notated music of the time and Gregorian Chant, and represents a shortened version of the Brevis collection artis musicae. This version was printed by Angelo Britannico in Brescia, in July 1497, and appears to have been very popular, as it went through a number of editions. No effort has yet been made to compare this manuscript version with the printed text.

Note: Written in several hands; majority of the text (ff. 1-28) written in a single hand in dark brown ink in two columns; writing block 123 x 85 mm; rubricated in light brown ink; initials and chapter headings in red. Folios 29-32 written in what appear to be seven distinct hands; musical notation in red and black on f. 30 v.-31 v.; dime-sized hole to f. 29, affecting text. Bound in original full undecorated red pig vellum over wooden boards; vellum missing from most of spine and a large portion of the rear cover. Three gatherings, of 12, 12, and 8 leaves, respectively; f. 30 r. blank. Vellum endpapers; large indentation in wood of the inside of the front cover. Gift of Philip Neufeld, n.d.

Title: De Pictura [On Painting].

Creator: Alberti, Leon Battista ; Unknown.

Place of creation: Unknown.

Physical description: Paper, 39 leaves ; 27 x 20 cm.

Summary: A late 15th century manuscript copy of the first known treatise on the art of painting, by Leon Battista Alberti, an Italian humanist whose life is described in Giorgio Vasari's Vite (cf. Vasari, The Lives of the Artists, trans. Julia and Peter Bondanella (NY: Oxford UP, 1998) [N6922 .V2213 1998]). Alberti wrote the Latin De Pictura in 1435, and then produced a vernacular translation, Della Pittura in 1436. He dedicated the volume to the artist and architect Filippo Brunelleschi. Leonardo Da Vinci greatly admired Alberti, and was familiar with this treatise, which almost certainly inspired his own work on painting, Trattato della Pittura.

Note: Small folio. Fine humanistic script in dark brown ink on paper in a single hand ; four chapter-headings in red ; one large initial drawn in ink on f. 1 r. ; several other initials penciled in for illumination. First two leaves written in two columns ; text block 18 x 14 cm. ; leaves rubricated in lead ; manuscript notation in other hands on front free endpaper and on f. 39 v. ; includes a few marginal notes, some trimmed by binding. Bound in vellum backed undecorated paper boards and housed in a protective plastic sleeve and slipcase. Gift of Bern Dibner, n.d.

Scope and Contents

Language: English. Date: 1767, 1786-1823. Title: Account book of the Constable of Hawsker-Cum-Stainsacre. Creator: Written by many hands. Place of creation: Parish of Hawsker-Cum-Stainsacre, Whitby, North Yorkshire, England. Physical description: Paper, 59 leaves (118 p.) ; 41 x 17 cm. Summary: Account book of the Constable of the Parish of Hawsker-Cum-Stainsacre from 1786 to 1823, listing the amounts owed and the amounts paid by the citizens of the parish. The volume also includes a loose leaf with the accounts from 1767. It would appear that the office of Constable (spelled variously "Conestbel," "Constuble," "Constable," etc.) was a yearly office, as the name that accompanies the title is different each year. Note: Bound in contemporary full dark-stained vellum over paper boards ; manuscript title(?) on front cover, though now almost completely illegible; text written in multiple neat English cursive hands. In addition to a loose leaf containing the accounts of 1767, several other small contemporary scraps of paper are present in the manuscript. History of Brandeis's acquisition of the volume unknown; possibly the gift of Philip D. Sang. Call #: Manus 10

Manus 11: Setenca do Padre Frey Diogo da Assumpcam. (Lisbon, Portugal), c. 1710

Date: c. 1710

Scope and Contents

Language: Portuguese. Date: c.1710. Title: Setenca do Padre Frey Diogo da Assumpcam. Creator: Unknown. Place of creation: Lisbon, Portugal. Physical description: Paper, 8 leaves (16 p.) ; 22 x 16 cm. Summary: Persecution of Marranos; Inquisition in Portugal; Conversion to Judaism. Full manuscript title: Setenca do Padre Frey Diogo da Assumpcam, Frade Capucho Antoninho, parte de Chrisťao novo, natural de Vianna de Caminha, de ordens de Evangelho. O qual salio a queimar vivo no Auto publico da Fee, que se celebrou no Terreiro do Paco de la Cidade de Lisboa aos 3 de Agosto Anno de 1603, por hereje Apostata de nossa Santa Fee Catholica, convicto, confesso, pertinaz, impenitente e excluido para sempre de juridicam eccleziastica e ordens, etc. Diogo da Assumpçao (1569-1603) was a Marrano martyr killed during the Inquisition in Portugal:

Assumpçao was born at Viana in Portugal. Only partly Jewish by descent, he was brought up as a devout Christian and became a Franciscan friar. His attention was directed to Judaism because of the ferocity with which it was persecuted, and in due course he made no secret of the fact that he accepted its tenets. Arrested by the Inquisition while attempting to escape abroad, he at first professed penitence, but later proudly confessed himself an adherent of the Law of Moses, "in which he lived and hoped to die, and to which he looked for salvation." Even in prison, he attempted to observe the Sabbath and dietary laws as he understood them, refused to take an oath on the Gospels, and argued vigorously against the theologians brought to convince him of his error. His execution by burning alive at the auto-da-fé held at Lisbon on Aug. 3, 1603, created a profound impression. He was considered one of the exemplary martyrs of the Inquisition by the communities abroad, and a number of elegies were composed in his honor. In Portugal, some devout Marranos formed a religious association in his memory, called the Brotherhood of S. Diogo in order to divert suspicion. His martyrdom inspired in particular the Marrano group in the University of Coimbra led by Antonio Homem [Roth, Cecil. "Assumpçao, Diogo da" in Encyclopaedia Judaica, ed. Michael Berenbaum and Fred Skolnik. Vol. 2. 2nd ed. (Detroit: Macmillan Reference USA, 2007): 615].
This manuscript contains an account of Assumpção's trial for heresy and its aftermath, and is described by the bookseller as unpublished. For more information on Assumpção, see Cecil Roth's A History of the Marranos (Philadelphia: Press of the Jewish Publication Society of America, 1947): 149-151.

Note: Disbound. Pages numbered 121-136. Written in brown ink in a neat cursive Portuguese hand. Sale price visible in pencil in upper left margin of first leaf. Description from bookseller's catalogue pasted to cover of archival folder in which manuscript was originally housed. Possibly originally part of the same manuscript as "Setenca do…Padre Luiz de Azurar Lobo," since both were purchased from the same seller and identified as being written in Lisbon around 1710; leaves are very close in size and hands look very similar, though here the ink is lighter. Summary: Autobiography of Robert Proud, classicist, educator, and historian of Philadelphia. Proud was born in Yorkshire, England on May 10th, 1728 and emigrated to Pennsylvania in January of 1759 at the age of 31, where he taught Latin and Greek at the Friends' Latin School (A Quaker school, as the name suggests), eventually rising to the position of headmaster. During the Revolution, he was a strong Royalist. In 1791 he began his history of Philadelphia. He died at the age of 85 on July 7th, 1813. He is described as tall, with a Roman nose, and "with most impending brows. Domine Proud wore a curled grey wig, and a half-cocked, ancient hat. He was the model of a gentleman" (qtd. in Simpson, Henry. The Lives of Eminent Philadelphians, Now Deceased.

Title: Professione di Fede ; Abbiura di Pietro Giannone ; Nota per il Doctor Pietro Giannone. Creator: Giannone, Pietro (1676-1748) ; unknown scribe. Place of creation:
Italy [Turin?]. Physical description: Paper, 1-53 numbered leaves, [1], 54-64 numbered leaves ; 28 x 21 cm. Summary:
Texts from the posthumous works of Pietro Giannone of Naples, Italy, written during his time in prison in Turin from c.1736-1748. For comparison with an early printed copy of the text, see Opera Postume di Pietro Giannone (Venice: Giambatista Pasquali, 1768). Pietro Giannone was an important Italian historian of the late seventeenth and early eighteenth century, perhaps best known for opposing papal influence in Naples in his polemical survey of Neapolitan history, Istoria civile del regno di Napoli (1723). This work, and his later Il triregno, ossia del regno del cielo, della terra, e del papa ("The Triple Crown, or the Reign of Heaven, Earth, and the Pope") were two of the first texts to deal systematically with the relationship between church and state from the perspective of the history of institutions of power and an historical account of sovereignty, which he called Istoria civile, "civil history." As a result of his writings, in which he took a polemical stance on the side of the civil powers in their conflicts with the Church hierarchy, Giannone was excommunicated and his books were placed on the Index Librorum Prohibitorum, after which Giannone left Italy to live in exile in Geneva. However, several years later on a visit to a Catholic village in Sardinia, he was captured and turned over to the authorities in Turin, where he spent the last twelve years of his life in prison. He was well respected as a historian during his own time, and Gibbon drew on his work heavily in the later volumes of the The Decline and Fall of the Roman Empire, thus ensuring his reputation in England. Today he remains a significant figure in Italian history of the 18th century. It is difficult to date this manuscript precisely, though it may be traced with some confidence to the mid-18th century, which places it very close to the date of Giannone's original writings (1738). A scholarly comparison of this manuscript to other extant manuscripts of this work, such as those used in preparing the 1768 edition of Giannone's posthumous works, may be a worthy project for a researcher in Neapolitan history. For more information on Gianonne, see Harold Stone, "The Record of the Losers: A Consideration of Pietro Giannone" in The American Scholar Vol. 54, Issue 1 (Winter 1984-1985): 111-118; and Hugh Trevor-Roper, "Pietro Giannone and Great Britain" in The Historical Journal, Vol. 39, No. 3. (Sept. 1996): 657-675. See also a modern Italian critical edition of Gianonne's works, Opere di Giannone Pietro, ed. Sergio Bertelli and Giuseppe Ricuperati. (Milano: R. Ricciardi, 1971). Note: Bound in 18th century full vellum over paper boards; gilt decoration to covers and spine; marbled endpapers. Leaf count disregards 2 blank and unnumbered leaves at front one at rear of manuscript. Written in dark brown ink in a single hand. First and final pages contain stamp of "Malvezzi, Duca di Santa Candida." The title of Duke of Santa Candida was granted to the Malvezzi (or Malvinni) family by Carlo VI in 1784, thus this volume must have been in the family's possession some time after that date. History of Brandeis's acquisition of the volume unknown; possibly the gift of Philip D. Sang. Call #: Manus 14
France. Physical description: Paper, 85 leaves (170 numbered pages) ; 15 x 10 cm. Summary: This small manuscript gives an account of the lives of two Catholic saints who opposed the Arian heresy in France and Spain during the early Middle Ages. Both stories feature women who convert their husbands from heresy to orthodox Catholicism. The first work in the volume is the Life of S. Clotilda (Fr. Clotilde). Catholic Burgundian princess Clotilda (c. 474 – June 3, 548) wed Clovis I, King of the Franks in 493. Her encouragement led her pagan husband to convert to Catholic Christianity, ensuring the triumph in Gaul of Roman Catholicism over paganism and Arianism, as Clovis's dynasty, the Merovingians, survived until the rise of the Carolingians in the 8th century. Gregory of Tours in his Histories provides extended accounts of the arguments that Clotilda used to convince her husband of the truth of the Christian faith. After Clovis's death, Clotilda retired to Tours, where she was known for her charity and sanctity of life. Clotilda is buried beside Clovis in the church they co-founded in Paris, now Sainte-Genevieve, and her feast day is celebrated in the Roman Catholic Church on June 3rd. Following the description of the life of Clotilda, the manuscript turns to another Catholic saint lauded by Gregory, the Spanish prince and Catholic martyr Hermenegild (Fr. Hermenigilde). Hermenegild was the eldest son of the Visigothic king Leovigild of Spain. He married the princess Ingunthis, the Catholic daughter of Sigebert, King of Austrasia, in France. Like Clotilda, Ingunthis persuaded her husband to convert to orthodox Catholicism from Arianism, for which he incurred his father's wrath. Leovigild captured his son during a rebellion, and after failing to persuade him to return to Arianism, he had him executed in 585. Hermenegild is buried in Seville, and his feast day is celebrated on April 13th. Summary: Two leaves excised from a volume of Graecismus, a medieval Latin grammar composed in verse by the 13th century Flemish grammarian Eberhard of Bethune, from Arras. Bethune’s popular grammar was evidently one of those Erasmus studied during his time in school, and four lines from these leaves are quoted in P.S. Allen’s discussion of the text in his The Age of Erasmus. Allen remarks that “its name, Graecismus, was based upon a chapter, the eighth, devoted to the elementary study of Greek, a feature which constituted an advance on the current grammars of the age.” Allen goes on to quote the lines: Quod sententia sit bole comprobat amphibolla, Quoque fides broge sit comprobat Allobroga.... Constat apud Grecos quod tertia littera cima est, Est quoque dulce cimen, inde ctmetcrium. These four lines may be found on the verso of the second leaf, the first two beginning seven lines above the somewhat large initial C near the center of the page, and the final two beginning with that large initial C of Constat, which indicates that this leaf comes from the important eighth chapter on Greek grammar from which the work takes its name. To call this a section on Greek grammar is somewhat generous, as the text generally confines itself to tracing Greek etymologies, many of which, including the above reference to “cemetery,” are ultimately spurious. Aside from his grammatical works, of which there are several, Eberhard wrote an important treatise against the Waldensians, entitled Antihaeresis. For more information, see P.S. Allen. The Age of Erasmus: Lectures Delivered in the Universities of Oxford and London. (NY: Russell and Russell, 1963): 39-41, available online at http://www.openlibrary.org/details/ageoferasmus007430mbp. Offprints of these pages are kept in the folder with the manuscript. Note: Disbound. Written in dark brown ink in three or possibly four distinct hands. Main body of the text supplemented by copious marginal notes, as well as some interlinear notation, much of which is written in a difficult to read cursive gothic script. Includes one large illuminated initial O(?), heavily damaged, in red with blue decoration and a partial border on f. 1 r. Additional initials in red. Trimmed from original size such that the two leaves are not of the same width (f. 2 is 17 cm. wide, f. 1 only 15), affecting the marginalia on both leaves. The upper and lower margins of both leaves have been trimmed also, again affecting the marginal text. These leaves may well have been used as the endpapers of a later volume, as discoloration around the edges suggests the former presence of paste downs. Folio 2 r. also retains traces of glue and paper from a time when the manuscript was pasted to another surface. Ex collection of Victor Berch, Brandeis Special Collections Librarian. Donated by Berch to Brandeis, March 2008. Call #: Manus 16

Manus 18: Nisbet, Charles. Questions and Answers. (Carlisle, Pennsylvania), c. 1798-1802

Date: c. 1798-1802

Scope and Contents

Language: English. Date: c. 1798-1802. Title: Questions and Answers. Creator: Nisbet, Charles (1736-1804) ; Bell, Samuel (1776-1854). Place of creation: Carlisle, Pennsylvania [Dickinson College]. Physical description: Paper, 45, [3], 70, [2], 274 numbered pages ; 21 x 13 cm. Summary: Charles Nisbet, born in Scotland on January 21, 1736, was elected the first principal, or president, of Dickinson College in Carlisle, Pennsylvania in 1784. He served the college both in this capacity and as a professor, teaching subjects including moral philosophy, mental philosophy, belle lettres, logic, systematic theology, and pastoral theology until his death in 1804. This manuscript consists of notes taken by one of Nisbet's students, Samuel Bell, during a series of Nisbet's lectures on philosophy. The first section of the manuscript is concerned with the subject of Philosophy broadly construed, the second section appears under the title "Metaphysics," and the third and longest section is dedicated to Moral Philosophy, untitled but beginning with the question, "What is moral philosophy?" It would appear that at least one other copy of the material on moral philosophy that comprises the bulk of the manuscript exists in the Grace Doherty Library of Centre College under the title, "Questions and Answers on Moral Philosophy," though there has as of yet been no detailed comparison of the two texts. For more information on Nisbet, see the biographical note to the Charles Nisbet Family Papers, 1769-1865, Dickinson College Archives and Special Collections; finding aid available online at http://chronicles.dickinson.edu/findingaids/mc2001.07.pdf. See also Samuel Miller, Memoir of the Rev. Charles Nisbet, D.D., Late President of Dickinson College, Carlisle (NY: R. Carter, 1840), and, for a different perspective on Nisbet's accomplishments, see David W. The Dickinson College alumni records list Samuel Bell as a graduate in the class of 1802; no additional information is provided about his later life and career. Note: Bound in original full brown undecorated leather boards; morocco label with title, "Nisbet's Questions and Answers," to spine. Written in dark brown ink in a single hand. Signature of "Sam[ue]l Bell" on front fly-leaf and in left margin of f. 1 r. Leaf count excludes flyleaves at front and rear. Date: 1846

Language: English. Date: 1846. Title: An Address upon the Close Connection of Education with the Welfare of "Our Country." Creator: Walker, Isaac R. Place of creation: America [Pennsylvania?]. Physical description: Paper, 22 leaves (final 2 blank); 18 x 12 cm. Summary: "An address...delivered before the Great Valley Debating Association on the evening of Wednesday October 21st, 1846." The manuscript records a rather immoderate patriotic speech delivered by Dr. Walker before this debating association. The text begins with a bit of doggerel verse, the first few lines of which read: "There lives in the bosom a feeling sublime, / of all 'tis the strongest tie; / Unvarying through every change of time, / And only with life does it die." The manuscript continues in this vein, primarily in the form of an exposition of the phrase "Our Country." A representative passage reads: "'Our Country!' What an infinite number of thoughts and ideas this short sentence calls up in the mind of every patriotic American citizen – I ponder the phrase: Our Country! My Country! Sweet land of liberty! America, 'tis of thee I speak." The precise location of the debating society has not been identified, as there are several "Great Valleys" in the United States, though the most likely candidate is a town in Pennsylvania. Likewise, no additional information is known about the author of the manuscript, Dr. Isaac R. Walker. Note: Notebook of 22 leaves ruled in red in four columns. Leaves sewn in a single gathering; binding is limp undecorated leather over thin paper boards; spine reinforced by buckram library tape. Written in a single hand. Manus 20: Geleitbrief ; incipit: "Von Gottes gnaden Philipp Abbt des Kays." (Germany), 1763
Date: 1763

Scope and Contents

Language: German.

Date: March 15, 1763.

Title: Geleitbrief ; incipit: "Von Gottes gnaden Philipp Abbt des Kays."

Creator: Philipp abbot of the imperial monastery of Corvey [= Philipp von Spiegel zum Desenberg].

Place of creation: Corvey, Germany.

Physical description: Paper, 2 leaves ; 35 x 22 cm.

Summary: This document was a letter of domicile issued to German Jews in the eighteenth century. Possession of a Geleitbrief was the only means for a German Jew to reside and live freely in a designated town. This particular Geleitbrief appears to have been issued to Salamon Berend in "Stael" (now Stahle, part of Höxter, Germany). For additional information, see the transcription of the manuscript housed with the document.

Note: Unbound document. Written in dark brown ink in a single hand ; one embellished initial ; includes intact red wax seal. Some portions stained and dirtied along earlier folds. Hermann Sternau's transcription of the document is included in the folder with the original manuscript. Gift of Hermann Sternau in memory of his father, Julius Sternau, June 6th, 1966.

Manus 21: De Lingua Hebraica. , early 18th c.
Date: early 18th c.

Scope and Contents

Place of creation: Unknown. Physical description: Paper, 124 numb. leaves, [2 blank leaves] ; 21 x 17 cm. Summary: Lecture notes in Latin for a course in the history of Biblical texts. A note housed with the manuscript dates the text to the early 18th century and identifies its author as Protestant: Judging from the author's desire to establish the fact that Hebrew is the oldest of all languages, the manuscript dates from the early 18th century. This was a favorite thesis of 17th century biblical scholars. But he is writing somewhat later, for he cites the Walton Polyglot Bible of 1697 (p. 124). The Author is Protestant, for he eschews the elaborate references to "Sacra Scriptura" characteristic of Catholic writers, and uses the names of saints, e.g., Jerome, Augustine, without the designation "Saint." The text contains, among others, sections devoted to the division of the scriptures, to the Talmud, and to various translations of the Biblical texts, e.g. "De versionibus arabicis," "De versionibus Latinis," etc. Note: Bound in original quarter brown leather over marbled paper boards. Gilt decoration and title to spine ; blue speckled edges ; cream endpapers. Text written in a single hand, only on recto of leaves ; right margin of most leaves ruled in gray. Hinges cracked ; front cover detached. Gift of Bern Dibner, n.d. Call #: Manus 21

Physical description: Paper, 93 leaves ; 17 x 11 cm. Summary: See extensive description of the contents of the diary housed with the manuscript, which begins: This Diary is a sort of apologia pro vita sua written by Mimi to her beloved Heinrich, with whom she is living – apparently in sin – in New Orleans. The New Orleans part of the diary covers only about one month, January 1831; it is sandwiched between two sections of the autobiography-cum-mishpokhology [at f. 50ff.]. The summary goes on to detail the rather flamboyant and extraordinary details of a life that prompts its compiler to quote Oscar Wilde's remark in The Importance of Being Earnest that, "I never travel without a diary. One should always have something sensational to read on the train." Note: Text written in dark brown ink in a single small and neat hand, presumably that of "Mimi." Initial leaf has been roughly excised, as has leaf 86 ; remaining leaves appear intact. Leaf count includes the two excised leaves. Manuscript written on light blue paper and bound in full leather boards with gilt-embellished borders ; spine reinforced with brown paper ; gilt edges ; marbled endpapers. On recto of rear endpaper upside-down signature, "Mimi, New Orleans, Marz (i.e. March), 1831," and signature of "W[illia]m Kraft," former owner(?), in left margin. Physical description: Paper, 194 numb. leaves, [5 blank leaves]; 32 x 22 cm. Summary: Sermini was born in Sienna near the beginning of the 15th century, but little else is known of his life. He wrote a collection of 45 tales (novelle) in the manner of Bocaccio, eleven of which were published in 1796 at Livorno in v.1 of the Pogegiali collection, to which the editor added Sermini's short work on the sport of boxing. These tales have all subsequently been published and many have been translated into English as well, including several in the recent Renaissance comic tales of love, treachery, and revenge, ed. and trans. Date: 1846

Scope and Contents

Language: English. Date: 1846. Title: Notes of Lectures on Theology. Creator: Taylor, Nathaniel William (1786-1858); William Wallace Atterbury (1823-1911). Place of creation: New Haven, CT. Physical description: Paper, 520 numbered pages [pages 493-520 blank]; 20 x 16 cm. Summary: Reverend Nathaniel William Taylor was an important Protestant Theologian of the early 19th century. He received his B.A. from Yale in 1807 and was named Professor of Didactic Theology there in 1822. Taylor's influence on American religious history derives primarily from his development and exposition of a position that came to be known as the "New Haven Theology." This system was largely an attempt to modify traditional Calvinist doctrine to cohere with the religious revivalism of the Second Great Awakening. In the process of developing this system, Taylor rejected Calvinist predestination, and, more troubling to his dissenters, he also rejected the doctrine of Original Sin and the traditional understanding of the Atonement, arguing that Christians have the full power to turn from sin and lead a godly life and that Christ's death is the means by which God urges sinners to be converted. These alterations led many to conclude that his theology was in fact Pelagian, and traditional Calvinists generally reject his teachings as erroneous and even heretical. Taylor's thought was an important influence on New England Congregationalism, and it has been argued that New Haven Theology was a major factor behind the church's decision to embrace Liberal Theology beginning in the late 19th century. This large manuscript records Taylor's lectures in four areas: "Moral Government" (1-21), "Natural Theology" (22-120), "Evidence of Christianity" (121-180), and "Revealed Theology" (181ff) and is thus an important and fairly comprehensive depiction of his mature thought. It was written by the Reverend William Wallace Atterbury, who graduated from Yale College with a B.A. in 1843, after which he attended Yale Theological Seminary (now Yale Divinity School), graduating in 1847. It was during his tenure at the seminary that he composed this manuscript from notes taken during the lectures of Nathaniel Taylor. After graduation, Atterbury spent several years as an evangelist with the American Home Missionary Society, then served as pastor of two Presbyterian churches before he moved to New York City and took a position with the New York Sabbath Committee, where he remained for the rest of his career. He shared his name with his nephew, the famous General William Wallace Atterbury, who also graduated from Yale and, after distinguishing himself in WWI, became an important railroad executive. aristocratic family, and when his uncle, Alfonso Borja, was named Pope Callixtus III, he began a long career in the Church with the help of his uncle's patronage. Known as much for his simony and nepotism as for his skilled diplomacy and bureaucratic gifts, Alexander VI was a controversial figure, and his election to the papacy succeeded with a bare two-thirds majority of the vote, with his own ballot tipping the balance in his favor. He might best be described as a politician of consummate ability, with only partial interest in the spiritual concerns of the Church. He was especially focused on advancing the careers of his children, including the son whose life is described in this manuscript, Duke Valentino. This volume, composed soon after the death of Alexander, is not referenced in the standard works on the period. A modern manuscript note in Italian on the front free endpaper records the suggestion that the work was written "perhaps by Greg. Leti or Tommasi." For manuscript authorities, cf. Pastor's History of the Popes, as well as Villari's Life of Machiavelli. For a detailed biography of Pope Alexander VI, see James F. Title: Breviarium(?) [fragment].

Creator: Unknown.

Place of creation: England.

Physical description: Vellum, 1 leaf [fragment] ; 8 x 5 cm.

Summary: Text reads: Et factum est. This phrase occurs many times in the scriptures, and thus it is quite difficult to try to identify the passage in question, though given the subject of the illumination, Luke 9:18 ff. is a likely candidate:

Et factum est cum solus esset orans erant cum illo et discipuli et interrogavit illos dicens quem me dicunt esse turbae at illi responderunt et dixerunt Iohannem Baptistam alii autem Heliam alii quia propheta unus de prioribus surrexit dixit autem illis vos autem quem me esse dicitis respondens Simon Petrus dixit Christum Dei

[And it came to pass, as he was alone praying, his disciples were with him: and he asked them, saying, Whom say the people that I am? They answering said, John the Baptist; but some say, Elias; and others say, that one of the old prophets is risen again. He said unto them, But whom say ye that I am? Peter answering said, The Christ of God.] (Luke 9:18-20, Latin Vulgate ; King James translation)

This passage, sometimes called "Peter's Declaration," is an important moment in the Christian scriptures in which Peter recognizes Jesus as the Christ, the Son of God. This text would explain the depiction of Peter, kneeling before Jesus in the upper half of the image, as well as Jesus teaching the disciples below, and its importance may well have prompted the illuminator to choose this scene to embellish with an historiated initial. As seen above, the King James translators render Et factum est as "And it came to pass," one of the most distinctive phrases of this well-known translation.

Note: One large very fine historiated initial "E" of Et factum est, cut from a breviary(?) leaf. Two scenes depicted in the initial: in the upper loop, St. Peter kneeling before Christ; in the lower loop, Christ preaching to the disciples. Background of initial done in gold leaf, as is the remainder of the phrase, -t factum est, beneath the initial; colors of pink, blue, white, brown, and gold. Leaf is mounted on a red background and framed in a dark wooden frame; frame is housed in a protective slipcase. Gift of Eugene L. Gabarty, 10/3/1962.

Physical description: Paper, 1 leaf ; 6 x 16 cm. Summary: A label once affixed to a book belonging to the monks of Himmerod Abbey in Germany. The text reads: Iste liber pertinet [c]o[nventui cruciferorum] in valle S. Mathie al[ia] nigrepaludis dicto sito in territorio meroden[sis] prope dueren. Et [c]o[n]tinent in eo – [1] Sap[ientis] platine omnia opera ; [2] Just[inus] de omni[nbib]us regni[m] terrar[u]m ; [3] [Text lost] de rebus romanibus. [This book belongs to the convent of the cross-bearers in the valley of Saint Matthias, also called the black swamp, situated in the territory of [Him]merod, near Düren. And it contains in it (the three following titles)]. Himmerod Abbey, founded in 1134, was the fourteenth monastery founded by Bernard of Clairvaux, and the first he established in Germany. Beginning in the twelfth century, it was a "convent of the Holy," here rendered in the Latin as [c]o[nventui cruciferorum. As described in the history of the convent, the founding monks decided to build their monastery in the valley of the Salm river, relatively close (c. 100 km. [62 mi.]) to the important city of Düren (L. Dueren), because they wished for the seclusion and penitential hardship of living in the untamed swamp that covered this region. In this manuscript, the scribe writes of the abbey being "in the valley of Saint Matthias," a quite pleasant name for the place, but called by others, it seems, nigrepaludib[us], or "the black swamp." In the Renaissance, the abbey was an important center of learning in the region, and a library was dedicated at Himmerod in 1506, from which this label most likely comes. The label was almost certainly initially fixed to the Bap. Platinæ Cremonensis, de Vitis ac Gestis Summorum of Bartolomeo de Sacchi di Piadena (Coloniae, 1540) [Temporary Call #: Spertus 51], which is the first work listed on the label. The names of the other texts mentioned do not appear in this volume and have not yet been matched to any standard texts, but it may well be that they are casual references to works that would be familiar to a scholar of the period. The second is likely the Historiarum Philippicarum of Marcus Junianus Justinus or Justin, the famous Roman historian. There are three additional lines of script on the manuscript, written in a later hand, which appear to refer to a subsequent owner, but this portion of the text has not been fully deciphered. For more information see Abtei Himmerod at http://www.abtei-himmerod.de/home.html. Note: Small paper fragment, initially likely pasted to the inside cover of a book, and damaged from its removal; almost certainly from Bartolomeo de Sacchi di Piadena's Bap. Platinæ Cremonensis, de Vitis ac Gestis Summorum (Coloniae, 1540) [Temporary Call #: Spertus 51]. Written in black with some red embellishment in two gothic hands. Verso also includes remnants of text in two very small hands, heavily damaged and thus nearly unreadable. The Maurice and Badona Spertus Collection of Judaica, Hebraica, and Early Printing. Gift of Maurice and Badona Spertus. Call #: Manus 33

Summary: Letter book of W. Thomas from 1793-1802. Thomas was a member (?) of the British navy stationed, during the years recorded in this manuscript, at various places in the Empire including Bombay and Calcutta, India and Canton, China. In this book he kept a copy of each piece of correspondence he sent to captains and admirals in the British navy, providing important evidence of the process of colonial administration in these territories. Unfortunately, no more definite information about the identity or biography of the author has yet been determined.

Note: Bound in contemporary full blind-stamped brown speckled leather; "Letter Book" and "1793" stamped on front cover; bookseller's(?) notes on volume written in pencil inside front cover; leaf count excludes flyleaves at front and rear, but includes two blank but numbered leaves at beginning of manuscript. Written in brown and black ink in a single hand. Water damage to outer margin of first 25 leaves, affecting text though writing is still legible. Note in pencil inside front cover reads "Kennedy Purchase." No further information about the history of Brandeis's acquisition of the volume is known; possibly the gift of Philip D. Sang.
